Scottish Government and STUC - Trade Union Act Implementation

Facility Time Reporting: Scottish Government and Scottish Trades Union Congress Guidance for Public Sector Employers

Introduction

The Trade Union (Facility Time Publication Requirements) Regulations 2017¹ ("the Regulations") require public sector employers to publish information relating to facility time taken by union representatives. These Regulations were laid following the enactment of the Trade Union Act 2016, which the Scottish Government strongly opposed throughout its passage.

Public sector employers will be in scope if they have at least one trade union representative and more than 49 full time equivalent (FTE) employees. Employers must publish the legally required information annually on their website and in any annual reports published by the organisation.

The reporting period runs from 1 April to 31 March and reports will need to be published by 31 July each year.

While the UK Government has published guidance containing information about the Regulations, the purpose of this document is to outline the Scottish Government's support for trade unions and facility time; to help ease the burden of the reporting requirements on public bodies; and ensure that the facility time data is set in the context of the benefits that facility time bring to the workforce.

Scottish Government Support for Trade Unions and Facility Time

The Scottish Government believes that a progressive approach to industrial relations and to trade unionism is at the very heart of a fairer, more successful society. Trade unions are key social partners in delivering our economic and social aspirations.

There is clear evidence that unionised workplaces have more engaged staff, have a higher level of staff training and a progressive approach to staff wellbeing. That is why the Scottish Government is committed to supporting strong trade unions in Scotland. This distinct approach is based on partnership working as demonstrated through the establishment of the Fair Work Convention and the Scottish Government's endorsement of its Fair Work Framework.

We believe that facility time adds value to the management of public sector organisations by providing a framework for constructive consultation and negotiation with employers, ensuring the effective voice of workers and improving workplace relations.

The Scottish Government considers that facility time is an investment in the prevention of workplace disputes, providing savings to both the public sector and the public purse, through a reduction of negative impacts on staff time and the number of working days lost through industrial action. In addition, involving the trade unions as partners in public sector organisations also contributes to our success and the well-being of our employees and facility time is an essential part of achieving this.

The UK Government's reporting requirements do not seek to capture any of the benefits of facility time and focus solely on costs. This is particularly concerning as the Trade Union Act 2016 enables UK Ministers to make further regulations at a future date to impose controls, such as cap on facility time, in order to deliver cost savings.

The Scottish Government is committed to working with public bodies, the STUC and trade unions to ensure that the facility time reporting requirements do not undermine the role of trade union representatives in the workforce.

FACILITY TIME STATEMENT

The Value of Facility Time

Facility Time generates benefits for employees, managers and the wider community from effective joint working between union representatives and employers.

A number of studies have shown that union workplaces tend to be safer and that trade unions help to promote skills and training in workplace. The Scottish Government recognises this through our support for trade union learning and equality initiatives, including: include Scottish Union Learning, Close the Gap, Fair Work Convention, Partnership Working in the NHS and revised governance arrangements for Higher Education.

The NatCen study² highlighted four main benefits from the use of facility time:

- Provision of a ready-made structure for meaningful consultation and negotiation saves money and reassures members that their views are valued in decisionmaking.
- Facilitation of partnership working with trade unions improves workplace relations and the reputation of an employer as 'a good place to work'.
- Earlier intervention in relation to complaints, grievances and disciplinary action prevents escalation into more serious problems and saves organisations (and taxpayers) money by reducing the impact on staff time and possible legal costs.
- Better communication during restructuring and redundancy processes improves understanding of decisions, minimises negative impacts and reduces the number of working days lost through industrial action.

The Fair Work Convention³ highlights these points through its 'Effective voice' principle. As they state: "It is clear from international evidence that employees and workers want a voice, not only to resolve problems and conflicts (which is important) but also to engage and participate constructively in organisations."

On organisational change, they say: "There are many examples in Scotland and elsewhere of how collective voice through trade unions working with employers has addressed a wide range of organisational challenges and contributed to organisational improvements."

It is the view of NHS Dumfries & Galloway that facility time data legally required by the Trade Union (Facility Time Publication Requirements) Regulations 2017, should be set in the context of the vast benefits that facility time bring to the workforce and to the employer, as set out above. This is supported by the Scottish Government, the STUC and our affiliated trade unions.
